Friday 16 November 2012

In an age where patients are demanding aesthetic restorations, the Faculty of Dental Surgery and the British Society for Restorative Dentistry are pleased to present this joint meeting exploring the issues surrounding providing ethical aesthetic restorations. The aim of the day is to provide clinical examples and appropriate evidence to help practitioners deal with commonly encountered clinical scenarios.

We hope that the day will provide a basis for discussion addressing the issue of intervention for cosmetic purposes. It will be of interest to dental practitioners, specialists and trainees.
